REQUEST FOR PROPOSAL: INSTITUTIONAL AUDITORS FOR FINANCIAL YEAR 2023

BACKGROUND

Founded in 1977 by Professor Wangari Maathai the Green Belt Movement’s (GBM) work has focused on conserving the environment by empowering rural African women and their families and creating sustainable livelihoods. To date, over 52 million trees have been planted and hundreds of thousands of women have been empowered and experienced improved family incomes.

Underpinning GBM’s work has been a fundamental understanding that when people understand the linkages between their actions and their livelihood situations (poverty, water scarcity, soil loss, and food insecurity) they are more likely to muster their energies and take action for change.

Today GBM still uses tree planting as an entry point into communities. This simple act enables our work with women and their communities, which is to start to address the root causes of the complex problems they face. Through GBM’s community empowerment and education approach, GBM takes women and men from different communities through a process of identifying their problems, understanding their source, and together exploring solutions. This approach is a powerful way to identify issues and understand linkages between cause and effect. It is also during these seminars that communities experience an awakening that they can do something about their situation.
